

Scottish Interfaith Week 2018 has the theme of ‘Connecting Generations’ below are some ideas for simple activities that could be held to explore the theme. We look forward to hearing of your great ideas and great events.

- Sharing stories across generations by inviting families/faith communities to hear each other’s stories
- Quiz nights with teams from mixed faith and mixed generation
- ‘Tea with me’ – host a ‘tea’ in your place of worship, community centre or home and have a simple ‘dialogue menu’ along with the tea and cakes. Invite young and old to join in.
- Interfaith Ceilidh – a good old fashioned traditional Scottish way of bringing generations together
- A simple craft sharing event involving very young + old; engaging the senses through touch, smell, taste, noise etc.
- Visit a place of worship other than your own to learn about inter-generational work in a different setting
- Interfaith and inter-generational food sharing with dialogue around what helps with healthy living
- Faith Community project such as young people from a faith community visiting a residential home for the elderly
- Getting to know each other by connecting over skill swapping, eg cooking , knitting, social media, gardening (interfaith and intergenerational)
- Inter-generational interfaith movie night (followed by dialogue) – explore intergenerational classics such as ‘Fried Green Tomatoes’
- Guides, scouts, youth groups undertaking a project where they assist elderly people in their neighbourhoods (shopping, cleaning, just spending time together)
- Local Interfaith Groups hold a dialogue about aging and invite communities (including young people)
- Faith Communities or local interfaith groups host a dialogue about tackling loneliness and isolation – (ensuring cross generational discussion)
