

Together For Our Planet: Young People's Competition

Dear colleagues

We are excited to announce that this year's theme for Scottish Interfaith Week is Together for Our Planet. The theme ties in with COP26 which is being held in Glasgow in November.

Scottish Interfaith Week will take place alongside the conference, from Sunday 31st October to Sunday 7th November.

We would like to invite schools across Scotland to take part in our young people's competition. Young people (S1-S3) will be asked to find new ways to make religious festivals more eco-friendly and present their ideas through a medium of their choice (art, cartoon, film etc.).

With less than 80 days to go until Scottish Interfaith Week begins, and with climate action at the forefront of our minds, we want to engage the future generations in how we can make positive change for people of all faiths, cultures and backgrounds.

Each school can submit up to three entries by October 14th, 2021.

The winning group will win a £25 voucher per person to use on Etsy, an online market place which supports small independent businesses. The group in second place will receive a £15 voucher per person and the group in third place will receive a £10 voucher per person.

To register your interest, or if you have any initial questions, please get in touch with us at info@scottishinterfaithweek.org

For more information visit our website www.scottishinterfaithweek.org and follow us on Facebook, Twitter and Instagram.

With thanks from the Scottish Interfaith Week team